COLLEGE

Watercolor by Davis Phelps

October, 1990

Volume LXXXVIV, Number 4

This issue of the Juniata College Bulletin is the Annual Report of the College for the 1989-90 academic year, concluding June 30, 1990. In it President Neff provides his report of the progress the College has made during the year and decade in meeting its goals, developing its programs, and establishing new priorities for the next decade. Also included is a complete listing of the year's contributors.

Director of College Communications:
David A. Gildea
Assistant Directors of College Communications:
Tracey DeBlase Huston '85
Joseph M. Scialabba '86

Juniata College is an independent, privately supported coeducational institution committed to providing a liberal arts education to qualified students regardless of sex, race, religion, creed, color or handicap.

Juniata
COLLEGE

Huntingdon
Pennsylvania 16652

As proud alumni, we were honored when President Neff asked us to send you a short note about the Annual Support Fund. We were so impressed when we saw the number of donors listed as Quinter Society and Founders Club members. Like you, we recognize the importance of annual giving.

Juniata relies on Annual Support Fund dollars to maintain its distinctive academic reputation. These dollars make a significant difference in the availability of scholarships, the number of visiting lecturers and cultural events sponsored by the College, and expenditures made for laboratory and facility renovations.

Annual Support Fund dollars provide opportunities for growth and improvement that are otherwise unaffordable. We need your support to maintain that difference.

Please consider the Founders Club with a gift of $100 or more. If you are already a Founders Club member, please consider an increased gift. Your support is critical.

Thank you for your gift to the Annual Support Fund, and more importantly to Juniata College. You can be proud of your role in Juniata's esteemed reputation for academic distinction.

See you in next year's annual report!

Sincerely,

Helen and Dick Hollinger

SUCCESS and CHALLENGE

Our passage from the decade of the '80s allows us the opportunity to reflect on the success of the past while contemplating the challenge of the future. The end of the decade marks another milestone in the life of Juniata College. The decade of the '80s was a period of stable growth and tremendous change for the college, yet it represents only a hint of the change which we will see in the decade of the '90s.

The success that we have witnessed at Juniata in recent years has been rewarding for me. This success would not have been possible without each of you who so willingly support the college. We share in this success as members of the Juniata community.

The fact that we have nearly doubled the endowment since 1986, cut our institutional debt by more than half, and nearly tripled the Annual Support Fund in the same period of time, are measures of our success and our strength.

Signs of our forward progress are all around us. The completion of the Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center, Knox Stadium, Oller Track and Raffensperger Tennis Courts have added a dimension to our college life that has made us more attractive in an extremely competitive marketplace. At the same time the facilities support our philosophy of whole-person development.

The computerization of our campus has moved the College toward technological standards dictated by today's changing world. Revisions in the curriculum, the establishment of the Writing Lab on campus, improvements to the Language Lab and an expanded internship program have greatly enhanced our abilities to provide academic opportunities necessary to foster intellectual growth.

Excellence in Academia

Our growing reputation for excellence serves to validate our commitment to providing the highest quality private college education at a moderate price.

Our continued ranking among the top colleges and universities in the nation by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching; the recent announcement that Juniata would be among 300 colleges selected for the Barron's 300 Best Buys in College Education; our annual entry in Best Buys in College Education by Ted Fiske, education columnist for the New York Times; and our sixth invitation to be included in Peterson's Guide to Competitive Colleges have advanced awareness of Juniata to a higher level.

Our growing reputation is evident in the students we are attracting as well. Students in the freshman class, members of the class of 1994, are from a broader distribution of states than any previous class. In addition, we have more four-year international students than ever before and we are committed to increasing these numbers for a very specific reason.

The changes in our global community this past year have profoundly altered the way we view the world. The end of the Cold War, the apparent failure of communism, the dismantling of the most visible symbol of the communist ideology — the Berlin Wall, and freedom in Central Europe have made these exciting times in which to live.

As I look forward to the challenge of the next decade, I feel we must prepare our students to cope with our rapidly changing global society. Juniata College must implement change to reflect that society.

One such change which will affect us as we prepare for the next century occurred when the trustees endorsed our policy on educational diversity. The policy reads, in part, as follows:

> As a small part of this nation's system of higher education, we have a responsibility to educate students for living in today's society and tomorrow's world. We want to increase opportunities for a higher education for all students who have the ability to benefit from our program. . . .
> We want to prepare students for living in a global environment. Juniata students should be aware of and sensitive to the differences that have historically divided people and led to unjust and discriminatory practices — differences in religion, language, culture, color, sex, and nationality. . . .
> We wish to further diversify our faculty, administration, and student body to achieve more encounters among people who reflect differences in color, religion, language, nationality, culture, gender, age and lifestyle.

Diversity is not only a moral issue in our lives, it is an educational issue as well. The capacity to deal with differences in people is essential for life in the 1990's and beyond. We will encourage diversity for the betterment of the educational life of our community. Juniata College is committed to taking up this challenge.

The Challenge of the Future

Other challenges facing us as we move into the century's final decade are every bit as far-reaching as the issue of diversity. We must commit ourselves to recruiting and retaining excellent faculty members. We need to aggressively seek funding for an endowment to support faculty chairs. We must continue to provide funds for faculty development for research, curriculum development, and professional growth. We need to provide additional instructional support resources relating to computer, library, and audio-visual services.

We must provide facilities which support the mission of the college as we enter the 21st century. This includes the refurbishing of selected residence halls beginning in the summer of 1991. We need to closely examine our physical plant and act swiftly to address our maintenance needs. We will also establish plans for improved programs and facilities for the fine and performing arts.

Most importantly, in order to meet the challenge of the next decade we must ensure adequate financial resources to support the college mission. With this in mind, we have established a $1,000,000 Annual Support Fund goal for the years 1991-1993. We will raise an additional $1,000,000 in program support by 1993.

Our strategies for facing the challenge of the '90s have been carefully thought through. We are poised to meet the new decade with enthusiasm and strength.

Your involvement in our effort to educate, however, is critical to our success. It is through our volunteers, our donors, our friends in corporations and foundations, our alumni, our trustees, our faculty and staff; it is through each of you that success becomes possible. It is only through your support that we can, as our Mission states, "awaken students to the empowering richness of the mind and enable them to lead fulfilling and useful lives."

THE QUINTER SOCIETY

Membership in the Juniata College Quinter Society is limited to those benefactors whose annual giving has reached $5,000 or more a year. Quinterians become permanent members of the Society when their lifetime giving equals or exceeds $100,000.

This special society is named for Juniata's first president, James Quinter. He was a leader in the educational reform movement of the Brethren Church in the second half of the 19th century. The founding of the Brethren Normal School in Huntingdon in 1876 fulfilled a vision that he had cherished for many years. When Jacob Zuck's untimely death threatened the continued existence of the school, Quinter's leadership assured the founders that the fledgling Normal School would carry on to become Juniata College.

In addition to invitations to special Quinter Society evenings, members receive a distinctive gold lapel pin, inscription of the names of the permanent Quinter Society members on a plaque to be mounted in the foyer of Ellis College Center, and prominent listing in the annual Report of the President.

The president and trustees of Juniata College extend their thanks and wish to give special recognition to the following members of the Quinter Society.

The Trustees, Faculty, Alumni and Students of
Juniata College
Hereby give public expression to their Profound Gratitude and Esteem for
Those who have established
Significant Endowments
in Support of Teaching,
Cultural Events, Student Financial Aid
and the Campus

TEACHING AND CAMPUS LIFE

Liberal arts education depends upon sound teaching and enriching extracurricular activities. These endowments enable Juniata to emphasize teaching as the essential element in liberal arts education and to nourish a full co-curricular environment.

Dr. John C. and Elizabeth F. Baker Endowment in Support of Peace Studies

Baker Peace Fund

William G. and Zella Book Professorship in Physics

Professor M. G. Brumbaugh Professorship in Education

Charles A. Dana Supported Professorships

Ford Foundation Faculty Salary Fund

J. Omar Good Visiting Distinguished Professorship of Evangelical Christianity

W. Newton and Hazel A. Long Professorship in History

Herbert A. and Marjorie F. Miller Endowment in Support of Teaching in Economics and Business Administration and a second major gift to purchase books and journals in these two fields of study

Edith B. Wertz Endowment for Support of Cultural Events

STUDENT FINANCIAL AID

Students deserve to be given recognition for their talents and the opportunity to pursue their educational goals. These endowments support scholarship and loan funds which recognize student merit and help meet financial need.

Jennie C. and Francis Baker Scholarship

Robert C. Baker Memorial Scholarship Fund

Joseph R. and Jane S. Good Endowment in Support of Scholarships

Dorothy Baker Johnson Scholarship Fund

Alexander Mack Scholarship Fund

Ross J. Nahrgang Memorial Scholarship Fund

Dr. Jack E. Oller 1923 Athletic Scholarship

Allen V. Shaffner Loan Fund

Richard M. Simpson Memorial Scholarship Fund

THE CAMPUS

Effective education requires a conducive setting and appropriate facilities. These endowments enable Juniata to pursue successfully its academic mission.

Helen Baker Library Fund

L. A. Beeghley Library Fund

J. Omar Good General Purpose Endowment

Dr. Jack E. and Elizabeth Oller General Purpose Endowment

Aaron and Clara Rabinowitz Library Fund

The Board of Trustees gives special recognition to major endowment gifts of $100,000 or more. These may be direct gifts, bequests or gift annuities in which the actual amount available through endowment in perpetuity is of the amount stipulated. These major gifts are recognized here, through presentation of special citations to the donors and through bronze plaques in the appropriate classroom areas. The quality of learning available to Juniata students is significantly advanced by these benefactions.

FOUNDERS CLUB

Since its origin in 1939, the Founders Club has had as its special mission the development of leadership gifts which are essential to the advancement of the educational effectiveness of Juniata College. In 1989-90 the Founders Club claimed some 2,095 members in five categories of membership.

Quinter Society	$5,000 and more
Presidents Circle	$1,000 to $4,999
Patrons Circle	$ 500 to $ 999
Associates Circle	$ 250 to $ 499
Builders Circle	$ 100 to $ 249

The College recognizes with pride the significance of Founders Club membership through the generations.

FRIENDS OF THE JUNIATA LIBRARY
$8,966.95

College constituents who have a special interest in library development support the Friends of the Juniata Library organizations. During 1989-90, persons named below made contributions to assure the continued strength of the general collections housed in the Beeghly Library. Members listed are in one or more of the following three categories: contributions of cash; donors of books appraised for gift-in-kind credit; those who have given books but did not request appraisal. As the Library's total collection approaches 200,000 volumes, the Friends organization is invaluable to the assurance of sound quality and steady growth.

OUTCOMES

I would like to begin by acknowledging some of those who gave me advice on this speech. I intentionally omit all those who offered only one of the various forms of "boy, am I glad I don't have to give that speech." It isn't really advice and it doesn't have a pleasant tone. Comments such as "don't be boring" and "say something funny" are more like threats than advice and also do not warrant thanks. Potentially more helpful was the suggestion that I borrow the tape of Jim Lakso's Beachley speech and learn to lip-sync it. Technical difficulties have prevented me from following through on this. Bob Reilly's advice involved using Freud and Skinner handpuppets and making funny voices. He has given this kind of advice to several people. The fact that none of them has taken it makes me suspicious and so I will not either. My wife Lauri has also given me plenty of advice. Recently, for example, she suggested that we ask some smart people over for dinner and make the speech a group project, like people used to do with painting parties. I rejected this out of fear that people might take the speech project as seriously as they took painting parties, with similar results. Probably the best advice I got was the first. It also came from Lauri, moments after last year's graduation ceremonies ended. "Congratulations" she said as she approached the stage. "Maybe you could use the prize to get someone else to write the speech." Perhaps I did.

My main topic for today is the class of 1990. From my perspective, it is reasonable to view your education as a group project involving most of the people in this room. (The painting-party image returns.) In particular, I would like to spend some time inquiring into our success on this project. In other words, how have you changed? What academic outcomes have four years at Juniata produced? I should say at the outset that my comments will be pointed mainly at the cognitive/intellectual aspects of your education, though I will occasionally stray from that target. In spite of their importance, I will not have much to say about what I presume are your increased social skills or what exit interviewers refer to as "increased personal growth." I also will not dwell on research suggesting that, as a group, you now probably smoke, drink and nap more than you did four years ago.

Even with these restrictions, I find outcomes to be a slippery topic. One of the reasons for this is that the players involved in the project often seem to have had different goals. What I mean here is that the academic goals of the institution are not necessarily those of individual faculty and faculty goals often differ from those of students. The institution is aiming at a set of goals described in the mission statement, goals like "the ability to read with insight, to use language clearly and effectively, and to think analytically." There are several others. I am aiming at what I think are a subset of the mission statement goals, and I expect most other faculty have goals that overlap both mine and those of the mission statement to varying degrees. Students, judging from most of my contacts with them, seem concerned mainly with grades, the degree and access to a career or the next level of schooling. All of these goals can be justified, but their diversity makes talking about outcomes more difficult.

Another reason outcomes is a slippery topic has to do with difficulties in measuring our success. In order to know if any of us are producing the outcomes we want, we need to know what to measure. This is relatively easy in the case of grades, degrees, and jobs and that may be one of the reasons we pay so much attention to them. Other outcomes, like those contained in the mission statement, are harder to assess. How, for example, do we know when someone is "reading with insight" or when he or she has developed a "fundamental value"? Uncertainty about measurement issues has led to disagreements over what measures to use, arguments over the validity of measures that have been used, and questions of whether or not we even ought to try. To complicate the issue further, it also makes a difference whether you want to measure at the institutional level, the course level, or the individual level. As you might expect of any topic even remotely associated with psychology, it is hard to say anything with much confidence. Nevertheless, I am now going to be more certain than I should be about what we have all accomplished in the last four years.

There is some good news, some things for which we can all be proud. The graduates of the class of 1990 may not all have the GPAs they deserve, but they all will have degrees. Since there is little evidence that grades are related to competance in later life, maybe the degree is enough. If you are like other recent classes, the placement office tells us that about 50% of you will be employed within the next few months and that another third of you will be in med school or grad school in the fall. The rest will be missing, presumably "in action". As a group, you can be expected to earn more money than if you had not gone to college. Recent data again makes college look like a good investment for both individuals and society.

Based on college wide data from Juniata's participation in the College Outcome Measures Project, research conducted by Ron McLaughlin, we can also say with some confidence that your critical thinking skills have increased in the last four years. You are somewhat better at using science and technology, at solving problems and at clarifying your values. You have made gains in using the social sciences and the arts. Your writing skills have improved.

Based on data gathered by psychologists Winter, McClelland and Stewart (1981) from a variety of kinds of post secondary schools, we also may expect that you have become more independent in your thinking, that you are more accepting of diversity, and that many of you have increased your abilities to function as leaders. Congratulations to all of us for all of these things.

There is also some less good news. Mainly it is that the changes that happened were not larger. The data from the College Outcome Measures Project places us at about the 50th percentile. This means that you have shown educational gains that are larger than about half of the schools that have given this test. This is respectable, but not great.

Much of my own research over the last two years has involved looking for Juniata's impact on learning strategies. There does not seem to be much. In terms of the way you approach learning tasks, most of you will leave Juniata with a bag of learning tricks very similar to the one you brought from high school. For me, this is a significant disappointment since I believe that your success in the "great out there" will depend more on how well you learn in the future than on what you have learned so far, more on your ability to cope with new problems than on your understanding of old ones.

My own simplified analysis of why we've all done so well and not so well involves only a few assumptions. First of all, I assume that your education, both now and in the future, is primarily a product of the activities you engage in, the things you actually do. Second, I assume that faculty leverage on what students do depends both on the academic tasks we set in front of you and on how we grade your performance on those tasks. (Though it is not my main point, I should point out that because faculty control of students' activities is imperfect, students are very much in charge of their own educations. Thus, students who embrace the spirit of a well thought out assignment and throw themselves at it reap a different educational reward than those who do as little as possible.)

Several things are important about academic tasks. First, different kinds of academic tasks require different kinds of behaviors. Memorizing the cranial nerves requires different cogitive operations than using a set of data to critique a theory. Applying a set of analytical techniques requires different skills than deciding which techniques to use in the first place. And so on. In addition, academic tasks vary along at least two other important dimensions—ambiguity and risk. Memorizing, for example is a task with no ambiguity and generally little risk, though risk varies with the amount to be memorized. Running a statistical analysis after you've been told what kind of analysis to do is also a low ambiguity, relatively low risk task. Using a theory to try to derive a set of new predictions involves both more ambiguity and greater risk. In general, as tasks become less concrete, as they move further from tasks with ''right answers'', answers that can be memorized or produced from a mechanical set of operations, they become both more ambiguous and riskier. Ambiguity and risk are often aversive, especially to students worried about grades. And so they are resisted, often in the form of students trying to negotiate the contract down, away from risk and ambiguity. Faculty often share the aversion to risk and ambiguity—focusing on memorization or procedural tasks is easier for us too. For one thing, it is easier to defend grades based on these kinds of tasks. Such grades are also less likely to irritate students. But riskier and more ambiguous tasks may be precisely the ones most likely to generate the complex cognitive structures helpful in future problem solving and learning. So educations are well served by such tasks even if GPAs are not. When students and faculty conspire to avoid them, the end result is that we have less educational impact than we might otherwise have.

Similar comments might be made about change and work. Becoming educated clearly requires changes that are predicated on work. Like risk and ambiguity, both change and work are generally resisted. To the degree students successfully minimize change and work, they also successfully minimize their education.

Now for grades. When I speak of grades, I mean to conceive of them broadly enough to include all of the evaluations we perform on student work, even those that appear very casual. Because grades are so salient, they have a great deal to do with how students engage the tasks we set before them. Most students concentrate on the aspects of a task most closely tied to their grades. These may create situations where we fail to produce the outcomes we say we are seeking because we don't evaluate performance very well. We may say, for example, that we want students to think critically. But if their grade depends on remembering what so-and-so said, that is what they will do.

The reason I am belaboring our past is that all of us are still in the middle of our educations. We all face a future of learning tasks whose content and form can't be predicted very well now. Our success at dealing with them is tied to how we understand the process of getting an education. Understanding that education requires change, work, and the willingness to accept risk and entertain ambiguity are attributes that would profit all of us.

For those of us with the special obligations of teachers, there are some more specific pieces of advice that follow from my comments. In particular, I believe we need to think more clearly about the outcomes we would like to produce and about how we can measure them. I am not suggesting that we need to reach concensus on operationalizing the mission statement, at least not right now. Trying to do that would very likely paralyze us. In the absence of received truth about which outcomes individual faculty should pursue and about how to measure them, a diversity of approaches is likely to benefit students more than faculty agreement would. What I am suggesting is that individual faculty need to try to articulate more clearly, both to themselves and to their students, what they want to accomplish and what would be evidence of their success. Among other things, such an exercise acknowledges that we are less than certain about what is happening in our classrooms and that we all have more to learn about teaching. It admits that we are involved in an enterprise that is appropriately regarded as a kind of experiment. It not only makes it easier to find and fix our flaws, it also makes it easier to see and celebrate our victories.

I also believe that we need to be more careful with grades. How we grade is, in a sense, an operational definition of what we value academically. We ought to use the attention grabbing quality of grades to focus students on the outcomes we value most highly rather than on the aspects of our courses that are easiest to grade. In our research on learning strategies, we found that grades were rarely related to processes like critical thinking, original thinking, or planning and monitoring one's progress as a learner. Perhaps we would be more successful at producing these outcomes if they were more closely connected to the grades we give.

For the students, I have less advice. It is true that most of you could have gotten a better education than you did. And it is true that each of you will have a lifetime of chances to do better. But an awards convocation is an awkward time to be wagging a finger at you and I will stop. Instead, I would like to congratulate you on your progress so far and wish you luck as you line up new targets, educational and otherwise. I would also like to ask a favor related to our concern with outcomes. Watching students come in and out of our lives every year is a little like watching a soap opera. We get attached to the characters as they come and go, even the villians and ne'er do wells. We come to care very much about how each of their stories turns out and none of us, yourselves included, can predict that very well just yet. So, please stay in touch. Let us know how things turn out. It will surprise and delight us.
